NORMAL SKIN

Normal skin is identified by being oil and moisture balanced, even toned, perhaps with slight shine on the nose/forehead and an occasional breakout.

What Normal Skin Needs - It's necessary to nourish and maintain healthy glow. Weekly exfoliation helps minimize occasional breakouts. It's always important to protect against future damage.

DRY SKIN

Dry skin feels and looks dehydrated with flaky, dull skin in areas. Typically, there is rough texture, sensitivity, and redness in areas.

What Dry Skin Needs - A boost in deep moisturizing is crucial for dehydrated skin. Exfoliating is key to eliminate dull and dry skin. Dry skin is more susceptible to premature aging so it's important to focus on moisturizing, firming, and protecting your complexion.

OILY SKIN

Oily skin is indicated by the overproduction of oil, typically in the T-zone with constant shine and/or "sticky" feeling skin. You're prone to breakouts, skin redness, and hyper-pigmentation.

What Oily Skin Needs - Cleansing helps to control oil and eliminate bacteria. Exfoliation helps clear away dead skin cells, clears pores, and diminishes excess oil. Brightening and calming should be a focus, along with hydration to maintain good skin health.

MATURE SKIN

Fine lines and wrinkles, loss of firmness, and slack skin are the most well-known characteristics. This skin type can also struggle with uneven tone, discoloration, and redness. Other characteristics include uneven texture, dry/flaky skin, and under eye discoloration and puffiness.

What Mature Skin Needs - Firming and lifting is one of the main focuses for mature skin. Brightening of dull skin and dark areas will help even your overall skin tone. Eye treatments and moisture will help existing and future skin damage.
